Dear Hiring Manager

Re: Web Developer

Respected sir/madam,

I would like to explain why I am a perfect fit for your Front-End Web Developer position. Having worked with a team and by myself on multiple web projects, I would be a great fit into your team, I am friendly and easy to talk to and enjoy learning with and from others. When not working or at school, I always try to build a better foundation the languages I am familiar with, and am always trying to learn other languages, trying to extend my knowledge on a variety of topic's.

I am always making sure that my projects are updated with the newest technologies/standards in the developing environment. Due to my dedication and hard work, I developed a strong leading role in all of the group work that is done in school, I make sure that the content is distributed to each person's personal strengths and that the content is done to an A+ standard. An example of this is during my collaboration on the blogging website, I led my group to get one of the highest marks in the class and one of the more complex projects in our class. The blogsite incorporated Html, PHP, CSS, Java-Script and MySQL to store data, create comments, login and create another page(article) on the blog. This was one of the first projects that I completed with a team and was one of my favourite due to the amount of design changes and flexibility that was required due to my team members opinions.

During my education, I managed to obtain a bunch of skills that will allow me to fit into your team perfectly. During my life, I learned to always try my best, because I know that someone can always do better than you, so to show teachers/employers that I am always trying to be on top, I try to lead all teams and make sure that all projects are finished to an amazing quality and that they are done efficiently and up to my high standards. An example of my self motivation is me creating my online resume/portfolio where I create and show some of my skills with front end web development. Working in your company would help me further my understanding of frontend and backend systems, industry standards, as well as fuel my self motivation and desire to expand my projects and skill in the always changing industry.

Most importantly I believe that my experience with Web Development and my attitude towards a professional work environment is extremely useful. I would be highly obliged to meet you so you can view my skills and work ethics in person. I am currently not working due to school, so my availability is flexible. If you need any more information about me, please do not hesitate to contact me. I look forward to speaking to you soon

Thank you for your time and consideration

Sincerely,

Luka Necajev
